Hematologic and immunologic parameters of an inbred colony of africanized Yellow baboons (Papio cynocephalus cynocephalus) were compared to those of a related colony maintained in California. After captivity for less than 2 years, africanized baboons in Uganda had significantly lower hematocrit and hemoglobin concentrations and similar leukocyte, erythrocyte, and platelet counts as did California colony baboons. Serum iron, zinc, calcium, and magnesium concentrations did not differ significantly, although the Ugandan baboons were lower than the California baboons for many values. Body temperature was higher in the Ugandan baboons. Interleukin 1 activity was similar in both colonies, with respect to IL1-alpha, IL-1ra, and S100. Aggregated IgG and total IgG were significantly lower in the Uganda baboons than in the California baboons, whereas IgM, IgA, and free light chains did not differ d4474df7b8
