Sourav Ganguly Sourav Ganguly tweeted his gratitude to Virat Kohli after the Indian captain celebrated his birthday. Sourav Ganguly Loading... On Tuesday, Kohli celebrated his birthday with a lavish bash that included a surprise 30th birthday for his wife Anushka Sharma. Kohli, who has spent the last three years playing for India and looked to finally secure a world number one ranking in October's Champions Trophy, turned 30 on Tuesday. On Tuesday, Kohli celebrated his birthday with a lavish bash that included a surprise 30th birthday for his wife Anushka Sharma. The celebrations were hosted by Kohli's good friend and former India great Sourav Ganguly, who posted the picture on Twitter with the caption: "Birthday celebrations with friends and family would've been incomplete without great times like these." India have not won a series in England since 2007 but Kohli's record there in the ongoing five-match Test series has been impressive. He has already scored two hundreds in the series and is the joint leading run-getter in the five-match series with 654 runs. The Indian captain also wants to do his bit to help

England and his team-mate Joe Root in their ongoing Test series. "Obviously it is a tough series and the opposition has performed very well. So we are going to try and play our own game and give them a good crack when we come out to bat," he said. "But the series will be won by whichever side comes out with the best spirit and spirit of cricket," Kohli added.The existing database for a sample population study in Leeds. A representative sample of the population of a town was extracted from the

Leeds telephone directory. This sample was used to establish the prevalence of schizophrenia in the population. The only previous study of this kind in Leeds involved a brief screening questionnaire. It is suggested that the sampling method used in this study is superior to the earlier study because the sample

The teen committed suicide on Tuesday, September 11, five days after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that transgender students had the right to use the bathroom of their choice, according to reports. News of Coma's death comes one day after out transgender teen Bailey Sargent was expelled from her high school after she shared a photo of herself in a dress and hat to Facebook, leading to threats of violence. A note left on Coma's body by a friend reads: "I am in love with Mimi, I can't believe I'm leaving her, but I have to leave. Mimi didn't deserve to be a victim. A victim is someone who gets hurt by accident. Mimi is a victim because of who she was inside. Mimi, I love you. I will never forget you. Rest in peace you wonderful human." "Mimi's family is devastated," her friend Sebastian Massee wrote on Facebook. "Mimi was the most loving, sweetest, bright and beautiful person. She loved everyone. She was a wonderful person and will be missed so very much." Massey added that Coma, who had battled with depression, was active on social media, and "wrote a beautiful tribute to herself." "You left this world a better place than the one you were in," he wrote. "You left a posthumous message to the world about your own life. You were loved by so many. Our hearts are broken. I will always remember you, Mimi." On September 5, the Supreme Court ruled in favor of transgender students who have the right to use the bathroom that matches their gender identity, writing: "Far be it from us to declare that children in public schools must be forced to sit with children of the opposite sex in class and participate in school activities. But if children are to attend school, they must be able to learn. And learning means understanding concepts and ideas — and perhaps most of all, respecting and tolerating different views." "It is for the schoolchildren who cannot yet 2d92ce491b
