IBM$ DB2$ Explain the TOP clause to generate an execution plan: click. PLATFORM$ 7.3 IBM$ ORACLE$ 10.2.0.2.0 Top 10SQLSession$ of each of the 10 users that are connected to this server AND Oracle used to say to build more, but they changed their approach, they didn't want to go up and up if you think about it. So they found a balance and they used your capability and your business needs to decide what are the resources that you want to use. They're using probably they are using your disk space, they're using your CPU time so they use all of these resources and they have also their own limits but they're using also your resources in a smarter way. Now it's not just your resource, it's your host resource. It's like your cloud your own cloud and you say: "I can have more but I cannot use more than this" it's a problem of your host. How to use it? It's a BI tool. The trick is that you're not allowed to make the session be alive. What you want to do is to put everything and then end the session. Then the Oracle BI server will create new sessions and will generate a new execution plan. It will create the execution plan but that's it. It will close the session. Then you need to restart the session and put everything again so it will execute and show you your results. It will end in a little bit and it will be saved and you will be ready to generate the new execution plan. Endogenous purines and pyrimidines in the oviduct of immature and adult laying hens. Oviducts from immature and adult laying hens were analyzed for endogenous purine and pyrimidine concentrations. There were no significant differences in endogenous oviduct purine or pyrimidine concentrations between immature and adult hens, although there was a trend towards higher purine concentrations in oviducts from the latter group. Comparison of oviduct purine and pyrimidine concentrations with those in oviduct fluid from immature hens at different stages of the ovulatory cycle revealed that only in oviducts from immature hens did purine concentrations decrease from the preovulatory to the postovulatory period. In contrast, in oviducts from mature hens purine concentrations were significantly higher during the postovulatory 1d6a3396d6

When we first developed MouseTool we wanted to do the same as the SQL Monitor. We also wanted to provide a GUI to work with Oracle's SQL*Plus and PL/SQL Developer. MouseTool is a tool for working with SQL*Plus and PL/SQL Developer. MouseTool is based on Oracle Forms. MouseTool has some nice features like: * Provides a toolbar that contains the Oracle SQL*Plus specific buttons. * You can run SQL*Plus from inside MouseTool. * MouseTool can start, stop, pause, finish and switch sessions. * MouseTool can print (local) and (remote) SQL statements. * MouseTool can execute and monitor SQL*Plus scripts. * MouseTool can send (remote) PL/SQL procedures to be executed. MouseTool Introduction: The goal of MouseTool is to provide a graphical interface that integrates with Oracle's SQL*Plus and PL/SQL Developer products. MouseTool provides SQL*Plus, PL/SQL Developer and Oracle's SQL*Plus the ability to be launched within the application. From there users can run, stop, pause, finish, print and monitor SQL*Plus and PL/SQL developer scripts. MouseTool also provides the ability to send PL/SQL scripts to the Oracle Rdbms. MouseTool Main Features: * Provides SQL*Plus specific buttons in the MouseTool toolbar. * SQL*Plus can be started, stopped, paused, completed and finished from inside MouseTool. * SQL*Plus can be printed from inside MouseTool. * MouseTool can be stopped, started, paused and finished from within PL/SQL Developer and Oracle SQL*Plus. * MouseTool can be configured to send (remote) PL/SQL scripts to the Oracle Rdbms. MouseTool Screen shots: MouseTool Tutorial: Click on this link to download the MouseTool Tutorial. MouseTool Requirements: For MouseTool to run you must have Oracle's SQL*Plus and PL/SQL Developer installed on your system. You can download SQL*Plus and PL/SQL Developer from their respective websites. MouseTool license: If you would like to use MouseTool commercially please download and print out the License Agreement. The invention relates to a fuel cell and more particularly to a fuel cell that has a partial flow plate. Fuel cells convert fuel and oxidant into electricity and reaction by-products. To do this, fuel cells have an anode, a cathode, and a
