Microsoft Azure Functions is a platform that enables you to host the code of your Functions in your favorite development environment (Visual Studio, Node, Java, Python,.NET, etc.). On the other hand, they are available as a Service that can be triggered by another event (e.g., SQS, HTTP, S3, etc.). In addition, Functions are secure and highly scalable because they are optimized to handle huge volumes of data with minimum impact on the performance of your application. Tracking on the geospatial world has become an essential part of modern life. Besides being able to pinpoint a position, it is also possible to determine the traffic flow, highlight the boundaries of buildings, detect hazardous places, locate a lost object, etc. All of these operations can be performed in order to improve our experience on the geospatial world, but they require more than a simple tool that you can use online. You need a tool that is capable of integrating all of the available data, intelligently, and providing you with the required information. The GIS software Reconnaissance has the power and the ability to make this possible. Introduction GIS (Geographic Information System) is a powerful tool that allows the storage, visualization, analysis and interpretation of large amounts of geospatial data. Usually, GIS is used by professionals to perform various functions related to the industry, such as building blueprints, planning, mapping, navigation, identification of endangered areas, etc. As you may already know, looking for information in the cloud isn't always easy. You need to manage the security of your content, have a lot of hardware devices, use a lot of tools, and you need to maintain all of the necessary processes. However, there is a way to make all of this much easier - through a data management solution. In this case, DataCloud is exactly what you need. This solution makes it possible to share your information, in addition to automatically storing it on the cloud. Windows Server 2016 is here! The operating system is already out of beta and is available for you to download. This tutorial focuses on the characteristics that make Windows Server 2016 stand out from Windows Server 2012
