Older patients usually suffer from a range of degenerative diseases, but are not necessarily affected by these diseases. Therefore, the study of the outcome of surgery in this population is a matter of interest in every orthopedic field, especially in total hip arthroplasty (THA). It is crucial to assess such outcomes, since they influence patients' quality of life. Hence, the aim of the study was to evaluate this question in THA patients. A group of 50 consecutive patients, who underwent a THA procedure, was recruited for this study. The patients were evaluated before operation, and before and after the surgery, using the Mayo hip and knee scores. The patients were asked to complete a questionnaire prior to surgery, including visual analogue scales (VAS) and other instruments. They also filled in a questionnaire 2 weeks and 3
