Desktop BBC News

Read the latest BBC news articles directly from your desktop in a clean and unobtrusive way. Select the category that you are interested in, and view all the recent news items published by the BBC. Select any of the items and view the title of the article, date of publication, category, publisher, readers, and a direct link to the full article. You can read the entire article in your browser or copy it to the clipboard, so that you can paste it into any document you need. You can also create shortcuts to the main stories, or to any particular article. You can select which items to see in the main window and even hide categories that you don't care about. You can select articles to read in the background, and reload them as often as you like. Desktop BBC News Instructions: After you launch the application, it will scan your desktop and quickly find the feed URL of the first feed that matches the requested category. You can then choose to view all the articles of the feed, a specific article, or just the number of the latest one. In the next screen, you can choose to view the article in your browser or copy it to the clipboard, and paste it into any document that you need. The articles are sorted by category and by date, and you can choose to have them displayed in a neat grid or in an alphabetical order. You can also apply filters that let you find the articles you are looking for, and even view the articles that don't include the ones you have selected. You can sort the articles by category or by date, and even apply a separate order for each of them. You can select any article you want and view its title, date of publication, category, publisher, readers, and a link to the full article. You can create shortcuts to any story, or to any individual article, and you can also choose to view the articles in the background and even reload them as often as you like. If you are done with reading, you can quickly open the settings and choose the opacity level, the external browser that you want to use to view the feeds, and also pick the colors for the toolbar, the window background, and the background of the web viewer. You can also choose to automatically refresh the feeds at a user-defined time, and even select whether new articles will go at the top or bottom of the list. Desktop BBC News Screenshot: Summary
