A: Looked around the web, and found some alternatives if `{[info exists env(HISTFILE)]}` { set file [read $env(HISTFILE)] while {[gets $file line] >= 0} { puts [format "%-20s %s" [regexp {^(.): (.) (.+)$} $line all_content] line] flush $file } } source: Q: How to get the first character of the value of a radio button? I have the following HTML table: state state state and the following Javascript: function xxx() { var radio = document.getElementsByName("state")[0].value; alert(radio.slice(0, 1)); } But if I run this code the alert gives me the second character, not the first. The value is the same for all radio buttons. How can I get the first character of the value of the radio button? A: The `.slice(0, 1)` will return the first character. You simply have to set the javascript code to this: `var radio = document.getElementsByName("state")[0].value; alert(radio);` A: One option is to pull the value of the checked radio button: `function xxx() { var radio = document.getElementsByName("state")[0].checked; alert(radio.value.slice(0, 82138339de`
