The “Play-by-Play” feature allows coaches and players to follow the exact actions of their player. They can also go deeper into individual player actions with the new “Game Insight” feature. The data will provide coaches and players with in-game information on their opponents, their last 11 matches, and the last 11 matches in which their opponent was involved. Technical Director Gianfranco Baldan met FIFA’s developers at the EA Sports studios in Los Angeles and Munich. Sport Games Business Analyst Gianluca Avola was also there, to discuss the behind the scenes of FIFA 22. Gianfranco Baldan: So let’s start with what we learnt today with FIFA 22. We are happy to be developing with very talented people. This was a one-stop meeting, since we are very busy developing FIFA 22, but I wanted to show EA Sports how passionate the FIFA fan community is. I know you believe in FIFA, since you created it and you have been part of this game since its beginning. But we also know that almost 20 years later, fans still talk about FIFA, and expect more. That’s why we are looking forward to your suggestions. This meeting was an opportunity for us to have a deeper conversation with you, the FIFA community. I am also very happy to see that the FIFA community has more than 400 million fans on Facebook, Twitter and other forums. That’s about 70 per cent of the FIFA fan base. Our platform is a community; we want to involve you, our fans, to make our game better. Gianluca Avola: The key will be to understand you, and what you want to see in FIFA 22. We know that you are very involved with the game, with its development, and what to change in each of its iterations. And it is important for us to know that. But we also need to see that you are also involved with each version of FIFA. If you want to know what to change to improve your game, then we need to communicate it properly. We need to know what you expect from FIFA. How can we improve it? Because here’s the thing: you guys are gamers, you want to play the latest version of FIFA, but you also want to be able to play FIFA 20, FIFA 19 or FIFA 18. And if you can’t play FIFA 19 or
