Its code is: CREATE TABLE `blogs` (`blog_ID` bigint(20) NOT NULL, `blog` varchar(128) NOT NULL, `post` text, PRIMARY KEY (`blog_ID`)); But whenever I insert a new row using mysql workbench it automatically generates a new id for my table. If I set the id myself manually it works fine. Any ideas how can I solve this problem? A: You need to set the default value for ID: ALTER TABLE `blogs` MODIFY COLUMN `blog_ID` bigint(20) NOT NULL DEFAULT '0'; Other options are AUTO_INCREMENT, or an other column with default value. Description of the habitat of the lost rainbow trout of Northern Australia (Oncorhynchus mykiss). The population of the lost rainbow trout (Oncorhynchus mykiss) from the Northern Territory, Australia, was recognized in the 1980s. Although records of the fish are sparse, it is known that the species is distributed in seven South Australian rivers as well as in a few streams in the Northern Territory. To gain an insight into the ecology of this species, fish from the Lake Victoria lakes and rivers were examined and the following three habitats were found; (i) aquatic habitats, such as pools and small water-courses, connected to nearby water bodies; (ii) rocky habitats in and around pools, connected to water bodies; and (iii) streams and small water courses, although no specimens were found in any of these habitats. The importance of each habitat type is discussed and implications for management are also considered. Tissue specificity of AZ 648931e174

Description: Hey guys, do any of you know of any great image hosting sites that are not picture rail like, I want to be able to be more than a thumbnails, but still small. You are able to upload with all different forms, save it, and even update with a ip address. The site does not get rid of any of the stuff that has been uploaded to it. Wanted to be able to upload images with no sizes allowed, such as just the image file itself. You can set it to 2Mb, 5Mb, or whatever size you like, then when it changes to 50mb or any size greater than what you want it to be you can go to the image that has been posted and change that size. So if you put something in there with a size of 5Mb and someone posts an image that it's over 50MB you can just change it. If you could just change the size, it would be perfect. Most of these sites you have to tell them what size the image is by uploading it first. Like I'm trying to think of the website name, but they have saved images, sometimes the image wont download.. I'm thinking of just attaching the image. I had this image here, just realized I could put in a web address and it would load it all up.Q: How to stop JQuery to apply on click event to more than one element I have the following HTML code.
